After only a few months this was effected. The previous solitude was replaced by an eager crowd, and people flocked in from-all sides. This was the moment which John had eagerly waited for. He had gained the first point: the next and the most important was to maintain this interest, and so earnestly did he labour at all that tended to the common edification, and so attractive did he make both the services and the sermons, that month by month, and year by year, the church was thronged with a devout and earnest congregation, while the veneration to the miraculous picture daily increased. Great as were his goodness and gentleness towards his penitents and towards all good Christians, he yet could be stern and severe in reproving vice, as the following incident will show. In the height of summer, a body of young men of the lowest class came to bathe in the fountain opposite the HIS ZEAL IN REPKOVIKG VICE. 95 basilica. Very often their coarse jokes and loud laughter attracted a crowd of lookers on. John was very much scandalized at this proceeding, and looked upon it as an outrage on the majesty of God, whose tabernacle was close at hand, and whose temple was profaned by their indecent cries. While he was considering what to do, four or five of them undressed in broad daylight, and prepared to enter naked into the basin. Filled with a...
